This is from a high school friend who is a retired career veteran.....

Whoever wrote this seems to have a pretty good feel for the general mood of a huge number of us who served. Sounds like a worthwhile venture to me. Go for it.

This needs to get circulated ASAP. I am a veteran and join with all other vets to get this out to more vets and informed civilians.

Interestingly enough, when GWB was president we heard about the the military deaths in Iraq and Afghanistan almost daily. With Obama in the White House, the mainstream media has been strangely quiet. ---

More than 1,000 American soldiers have lost their lives in Afghanistan in the last 27 months. This is more than the combined total of the nine years before. Thirty died in August. During the last month, over 50 additional NATO and US servicemen have been murdered, inside jobs by those who are hired to be a force for good in Afghanistan.

The commander in Chief is AWOL. Not a peep, although he ordered the White House flag flown at half-staff for the Sikhs that were killed. I detect a deep disgust, a fury, growing in the ranks of the military against the indifferent incompetence of this president.

It has taken on a dangerous tone. No one knows what to do about him, but the anger runs deep as the deaths continue with no strategic end in sight to the idiocy of this war. Obama has had 4 years to end this futile insanity, during which time he has vacationed, golfed, campaigned, and generally ignored the plight of our men and women in uniform. But there is now a movement afoot in the armed services to launch a massive get out the vote drive against this president.

Not just current active duty types, but the National Guard, Reserves, the retired, and all other prior service members. This is no small special interest group, but many millions of veterans who can have an enormous impact on the outcome of the November election if they all respond.

The million military retirees in Florida alone could mean an overwhelming victory in that state if they all show up at the polls. It might not keep another one hundred U.S. troops from dying between now and November, but a turn out to vote by the military against this heart breaking lack of leadership can make a powerful statement that hastens a change to the indifference of this shallow little man who just lets our soldiers die.

Veterans: Please forward to your lists. High Priority!

In reading the lives of great men, I found that the first victory they won was over themselves. ... Self-discipline with all of them came first."

-- Harry S. Truman,
33rd U.S. president
